O'REAR ANSWERS ALL OBJECTORS

Shows There Was No Ground
For Big Sandy Towns To Drop Normal Applications

Frankfort, Ky., June 10—Denial that the possession of buildings that could be used for opening of the two new state normal schools this fall was a necessary corollary to a town or city being considered as a location for one of the schools, was made in a statement given out here late Friday by Judge E. C. O'Rear, chairman of the normal school committee named by the general assembly to locate the two institutions. He also gave out correspondence between himself, George Colvin, state superintendent of public instruction, members of the commission and the secretaries of the Ashland and Catlettsburg chambers of commerce.

The statement was prompted by publication of a letter from G. A. Nash, secretary of the Ashland chamber of commerce, and Lem Keller, secretary of the Catlettsburg chamber of commerce, withdrawing the site offered by those two cities from the list of sites offered for the school to be placed in eastern Kentucky. A statement issued by the state board of education, composed of Superintendent Colvin, Attorney General Dawson, and Secretary of State Fred A. Vaughn, also was answered by Judge O'Rear.

Following issuance of the statement, a member of the commission, who asked that his name be withheld, said that he thought it would probably be a good idea if the commission did not try to hurry in the selection of the site and visited all of the cities, although Judge O'Rear in his statement, said that it had not been determined whether or not the commission would visit the cities. This member said that, as the commission is not limited as to time by the bill creating it, he felt it might be well for the commission not to select the sites for a year or eighteen months and then submit its final selection to the next legislature for ratification, in spite of the fact that the bill makes the commission the final authority.

Judge O'Rear, in his statement referring to the portion of the Ashland and Catlettsburg letter regarding buildings being a requirement, said:

"At the Louisville hearing in behalf of the commission and as its chairman, I publicly stated precisely what was stated at the Lexington meeting the week following, viz:

"That due to a shortage of teachers the state board of education was anxious to open these two schools this fall, if possible, about the first of September, and that the commission was holding its meetings and hoped to be able to reach a conclusion in time to accommodate that purpose of the state board. Nothing was said or intimated or thought that no place would be considered as a location that had not buildings to offer in which to open the school this fall."

The state board of education in its statement given out Friday, said that the members had just noticed a statement to the effect that the chairman of the normal school commission had stated that the state board of education had requested the commission to act promptly in locating the schools in order that the schools may be started in September of this year.

"If the chairman of the commission made such a statement," said the statement, "he is evidently laboring under a wrong impression as to the attitude of the state board of education. The state board of education has made no such request and has fixed no definite time at which it is desired that the new schools begin to function."

LAFON, WILSON PROVES REAL ORATOR IN HIS COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

The commencement address of Lafon Wilson Thursday night, when graduates of Madison High School held their exercises at the First Christian church, has been so highly complimented by all who heard it that the Daily Register takes pleasure in printing the work of this splendid young man. He spoke as follows:

In the days of the statesman of Israel, the cities of the Orient had watchmen who called the periods of the night from their watch towers on the wall. They gave the alarm at the sight of approaching danger. When safety was felt they answered, "All is well." The night has an atmosphere of mystery and romance, that gives a strong appeal to this ancient custom. It is the time when armies make their secret advances, when spirits dare stir around, when the martial tread of big events has its beginning, when dire schemes are born in the minds of men.

Ever since historic dawn society has taken special precautions to guard against the dangers of the night—against the foes from without and the foes from within. In times of war we have our silent sentinels who keep the watches of the night. We remember the historic cry of the watchman in the days of the Revolution, "Past three o'clock and Cornwallis is taken." The lantern in the old North Church tower that gave the signal to Paul Revere for his midnight ride is equally memorable. Men are looking upon this period in the drama of the ages as the night of the Nation's ills. Since we, as the Class of 1922, are soon to take an active part in this drama, it seems we can ask no more pertinent question than that of the ancient seers, "Watchman, what of the night?" Is it for spent? Are there signs of one approaching dawn? Can we say with Shakespeare:

"But, look, the morn in russet mantle clad,
Leaps o'er the dew of yon high eastern hills."

We are anxious as young men and women to know what responses we get when we ask the question put up by Isaiah of old, "Is there a note of optimism in the answer? Does it indicate that we are bordering on the brink of doom, or is it pregnant with promise? From the watch tower rings the reply strong and clear, to all the graduates of American high school: You are 'the heirs of all the ages in the foremost files of time.' All of the accomplishments of men in art and science are left you as your heritage—as your tools with which to work, a career of achievement is open to every one of you who has the ambition to push forward into the great avenues of activity. The watchman tells me that there are many obstacles yet in the pathway of the Nation. He gives the alarm

Friends of the family here regretted to learn of the death of Cynthia S. Renaker, father of Frank Renaker, who lived here a number of years as manager of the Renaker Poultry Company, which is still owned by the Renaker brothers. The Winchester Sun said of the elder Renaker's death:

While holding his gun in his hands he attempted to step upon a stump which proved to be rotten, causing him to fall forward, when in some unaccountable way, the gun was discharged, part of the load of shot entering his stomach and part ranging up the length of his body and shooting out his right eye. He was conscious for a short time, but died within two hours. He would have graduated from Riverside Institute within one more year. He was a universal favorite and the whole community is overcome with sorrow.

LEGION MEMORIAL IN MAMMOTH CAVE

Will Be Dedicated With An Impressive Ceremony During State Meet at Glasgow

Madison county Legionnaires who expect to attend the state convention this year will be interested in the dedicatory ceremonies of the American Legion Memorial at Mammoth Cave, which will feature the convention of the American Legion of Kentucky to be held at Glasgow, August 28, 29 and 30.

On the third day the entire program will be held at Mammoth Cave.

In the "Rotunda," one of the cave's majestic domes, and the junction point for the several branches of the historical old cavern, there will be dedicated a memorial, the base of which will be a crypt for the names of the heroic and immortal dead of the World War from the entire nation. This monument will be erected by the members of the Barren County Post 28 of Glasgow, which feels that Mammoth Cave will be a most suitable place to perpetuate the undying memory of the heroes of the World War. Little need be said of the history of Mammoth Cave and to try to describe it in so little space is impossible.

The Cave was known and used as a designation point for surveys as early as the year 1797. From the part of the cave near the entrance, saltpeter was mined for the manufacture of gunpowder during the War of 1812. It is near the remains of three saltpeter works which may yet be seen in the cave that the Legion monument will be erected.

The Legion announcement says nothing could be a more fitting than that we should complete a triangle of hallowed places in Kentucky, and no more appropriate spot could be chosen for such a national monument than this gigantic hole which winds for miles and miles under the hills and valleys of God's Garden Spot—Kentucky.

About 50 miles to the northwest of Mammoth Cave lies the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln, now dedicated into a National Park to stand as a perpetual honor to the poor farm boy who rose above the pressure of circumstances and became the Union's helmsman during its most tempestuous days.

To the southwest of the cave, almost equidistant, on the site of the farm where the first and only president of the Southern Confederacy first saw the light of day, remnants of the Gray Host are erecting a shaft to their honored leader, Jeff Davis.

The erection of this American Legion Monument will complete the triangle, the corners of the base being represented by the birthplaces of America's Civil War presidents, the apex the resting place of the names of the fallen warriors of our present day democracy.

Storms, fires, vandals and war may destroy or uproot cemeteries and monuments on the surface of the earth, but nothing less than a violent eruption of the earth itself will ever efface this unusual subterranean cenotaph.

Invitations to attend the ceremonies have been extended to President Warren G. Harding, General John J. Pershing, Governor Edwin P. Morrow, Lieutenant Governor Ballard, all of Kentucky's representatives in Congress, National officers of the American Legion and the various state headquarters of the American Legion.

The dedicatory address will, it is planned, be delivered by Hamilton MacNider, National Commander of the American Legion. An important place on the program will be taken over by Gold Star mothers of the Woman's Auxiliary of the American Legion.

Permission has been granted for the erection of this monument by the Mammoth Cave management, and for the first time in the history of the Cave, the gates will be thrown open to the delegates and visitors to the ceremonies.
